Patrick Feeney

Working in Accenture's global innovation hub has helped me develop the skills to adapt to novel challenges and make an impact. I pride myself on building robust, compelling narratives through design, backed up with rigorous academic and strategic thinking.

My current team is called the Human Sciences Studio (HSS), we conduct humanities research on the future of sustainable and ethical technology, so distilling complex ideas into compelling outputs is an important skill of mine. When working at a global innovation hub, juggling multiple diverse projects is the norm, so I'm able to switch between projects, adapt to new challenges, and manage my time effectively.

From a giant game of Kerplunk to a futuristic photo booth, and from a moving wall of fabric to a deck of tarot cards, I've collaborated with my team on a wide range of creative outputs—spanning print, interaction design, web development, art direction, exhibitions, branding, copywriting, motion graphics, illustration, and more. This means I have an excellent and adaptable understanding of the Creative Cloud Suite, as well as a core understanding of web development and UX principles. I'm also keenly aware of the limits created by digital tools, which means pairing technology skills with real-world considerations and real-world techniques whenever possible. For example, when creating a selection of tarot cards during a collaboration with the Alan Turing Institute, I hand-drew and scanned my illustrations to provide a textured and human touch to the designs.

I've worked on a broad range of projects from concept to completion, so I'm comfortable working with printers, prepping files, and making last minute adjustments when they inevitably occur. As a designer on a creative team of five, I'm able to collaborate effectively with multidisciplinary stakeholders. Oftentimes this means stepping beyond my creative team and working with non-designers, presenting research, delivering workshops, adapting to feedback and up-skilling teams on design methodologies. The HSS is a client facing studio, so I've also gained a breadth of experience collaborating with Accenture's clients to develop award winning creative outputs.

Accenture is a global brand with a strong identity, so creating work in this context means knowing when to colour within the lines and when to think outside the box. This means I'm able to adhere to strict brand guidelines while maintaining a sense of creative flair, but I'm also able to create bespoke identities that surprise and delight. I am deeply passionate about inclusive practices, and believe that organisations have a duty to the communities they depict in campaigns or service through their operations. I have experience collaborating with LGBTQIA organisations, working as the lead designer for GAZE Film Fest since 2021. I'm versed in the latest sustainable and accessible design practices, working closely with organisations to promote sustainability at Accenture and beyond. My work is also focused on human centred technology. As part of my practice I use speculative design techniques to unravel potential futures, and their positive or negative implications.

What does it mean for technology to deserve our trust? How can clients build it? These questions drive the interactive game, Trust Fall. An exercise in self-reflection, the games asks industry professionals to place their organisation under the microscope when it comes to building and maintaining trustworthy practices. Inspired by KerPlunk, a game of dexterity in which a collection of marbles is held in place by a nest of straws, this giant version asks players to consider a piece of technology – such as a product or service – and explore the importance of earning and maintaining trust.

Facilitation, Consequencing, Visual Design, Interaction Design, Storytelling, Public & Private Policy, Visual Identity

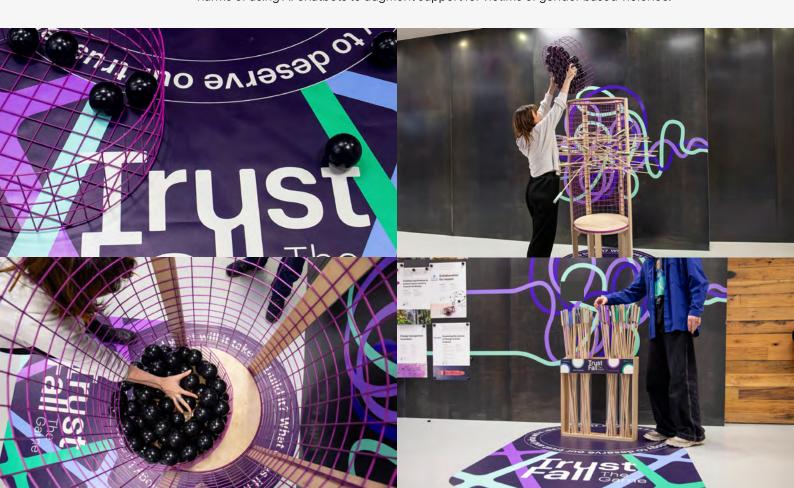

The sticks represent some of the core foundations of trustworthy technology: Data Protection, Ethics, Inclusivity, and Transparency. The balls themselves symbolize the trust, precariously supported by these foundations. As players progress, they face rapid-fire questions about organizational policy, design, and public perception. For each pain point or unclear answer, players must remove three sticks, watching their trust fall in the process. At the game's conclusion, you get a review of your processes to help fortify success or address issues. Because, in real life, you rarely get a second go.

Creative Development

The concept for Trust Fall emerged during a creative team sprint, where we explored innovative ways to represent both the fragility of trust, and how it can be built and supported over time. The visual identity I created was inspired by the game itself, riffing on the intersection between the foundations of trust and the gaps that inevitably occur. To enhance the game, we also developed a digital app that accompanies the physical setup. This app allows users to answer questions in real-time and receive a personalised printout of their results to take with them. This project was awarded a place in the 100 archive for its design excellence.

Engaging Audiences

I ran this engagement with a variety of cross-industry Accenture clients to pinpoint their organisational weaknesses, potential threats to public trust & safety, and socialise the themes and methodologies of the Human Sciences Studio. Most notably, I ran a session with a C-Suite member of a Global South CSO. We used the game to analyse the potential harms of using AI chatbots to augment support for victims of gender based violence.

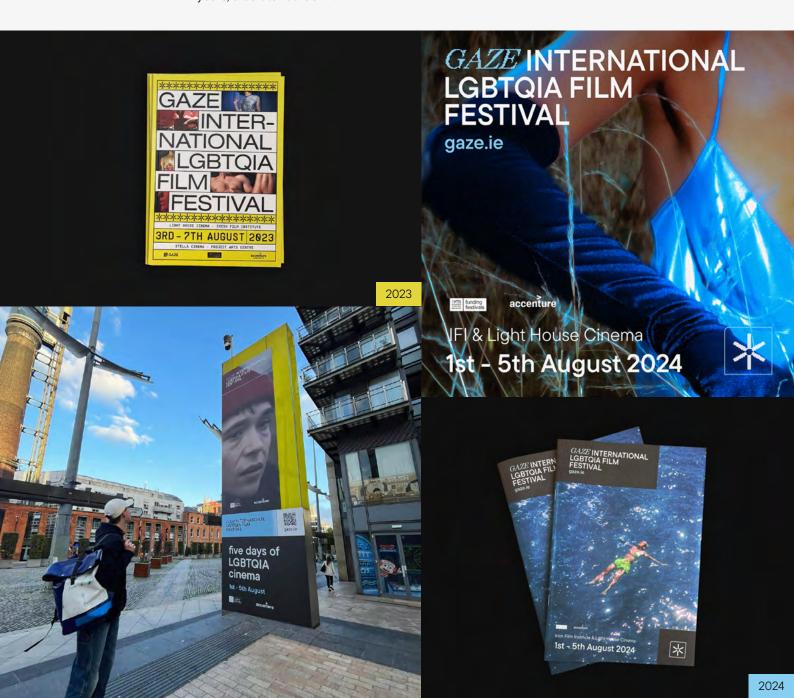

GAZE is a queer film festival hosted in the Light House Cinema and Irish Film Institute every summer. Initially formed in 1992 as an underground film club, the festival itself predates the legalisation of homosexuality in Ireland. GAZE's visual identity is inspired by research into the history of queer resistance in Ireland, riffing on protest posters and underground nightclub leaflets.

Visual Design, Branding, Print Design, Project Management, Workload Management, Creative Direction

Rooted in our past but aiming its sights on the future, the design puts shape around that which cannot be contained or defined. Namely, queer joy. Each year champions a new colour, building a rainbow of programmes as the years progress. The powerful sunlight yellow of 2023 referenced the rebirth of summer, as cinema-goers emerged from the pandemic together and set their sights on the future. My work on the 2023 identity was awarded a spot in the 100 Archive for its noteworthy design.

2024 Rebrand

Building upon the identity I developed in 2022, I sought to fine tune the brand and bring it into the 21st Century. Simplifying the pixel motif, and highlighting accessibility across all outputs, especially the website and printed programme. The new identity feels fresh, dynamic and youthful whilst still retaining the early-digital-age aesthetic of previous years, albeit toned down.

Responsible AI Masterclass

I worked as a designer on a Responsible AI learning module created by Accenture and The Alan Turing Institute. After its conclusion, I was asked to join a team to design & develop the course content into a workshop which outlined the key ethical considerations associated with deploying AI systems. This workshop was delivered to C-Suite members of a UK digital literacy charity, and supplied the organisation with a set of recommendations on how to utilise AI in a responsible manner.

Collaboration For Impact

Tapping into a wider collaboration between Accenture & Barclays' Unreasonable Group, I developed an in-person engagement titled "The Collaboration Card Game". The original project was an analysis of the social dynamics and cognitive barriers that occur during group collaborations. I was responsible for adapting this research into cards which aimed to 'diagnose' and 'treat' a variety of collaboration ailments.

Technology Adoption

Building on a research project which highlighted the cognitive barriers associated with technology adoption. I created a Vox-style explainer which condensed the findings into a 3 minute video. I collaborated to write the script, film interviews with the research team and record the narration.

After which I moved forward to edit the content and design the motion graphics treatment for the final deliverable. The video was presented to a variety of Accenture clients during the course of the project, which helped them to engage with our research methodologies and core purpose.

The New Tennant

The New Tenant is a broad sheet publication which features a selection of archival writings on the topic of renter activism and contrasts it with contemporary opinion pieces. Aiming to draw similarities between past struggled and today's difficult landscape. The project was launched by the Irish tenants union, CATU as part of their outreach initiative.

The layout presents both archival and contemporary analysis side by side, which meant finding a balance between the old and new. The final design focused on clarity, with a minimal treatment of type and layout as a response to my research into CATU's archive of publications.
